RAHSAN DUREN
Verwegenheit

When we hear the words "black" and "abstract," no doubt the first thing that comes to mind is Malevich's Black Square, exhibited in 1915: a roughly 80x80 cm canvas that anyone could paint. According to Malevich, the Black Square is "the zero point of art." It is the erasure of all art history up to that moment. It draws from ancient geometry and arithmetic, where forms and numbers were highly symbolic and mysterious. Rahşan Düren's "black-abstractions" are the complete opposite of the Black Square. They are not harmonic but chaotic, not utopian but dystopian, not optimistic but nihilistic. Like Malevich, Düren does not pursue "emotionless, pure, ideal" forms. On the contrary, her abstractions are distorted, unfinished, formless, and intensely emotional.

SEUNG HWAN KIM
Organism

Highly anticipated "Organism" exhibition by renowned Korean artist Seung-Hwan Kim represented by Harmonie Nine Gallery, featuring captivating sculptures that push the boundaries of the medium and explore the interplay between nature, light, and color in our lush gardens. With an impressive artistic journey and international recognition, Kim's "Organism" series skillfully captures the intricate changes in natural forms, representing the order and eternal nature found in the world around us.

AHAD SAADI
Paradise

Ahad Saadi's textile-based works are distinguished by their layered compositions of diverse fabrics, creating rich, tactile surfaces that evoke both memory and identity. Drawing subtle inspiration from Oriental aesthetics, his pieces often incorporate intricate patterns, delicate embroidery, and warm, earthy tones reminiscent of traditional Eastern craftsmanship.

NORREM ESSAM
Venice

In the realm of modern art, where the canvas becomes an open sea of exploration, Norrem emerges as a navigator on this profound journey. Renowned across the Middle East for his bold, large-scale abstract paintings, he invites us to venture beyond the superficiality of every day live and join him into a world rich with vibrant expression and deep introspection.
